

meislin P R O J E C T S

Nathan Leight | Ecclesiastes On My Mind

On View February 15 – March 23rd, 2018
Open Tue- Fri 12-5pm and by appointment

Opening Reception:
Thursday, February 15 | 6-8pm

Meislin Projects is pleased to present Nathan Leight's debut solo show: Ecclesiastes On My Mind. The show, exhibited in a salon style, will consist of photographs that illuminate the often underappreciated triumphs of our daily being. The images vary in subject and in geographical location, and through them runs a common thread of engagement, chance, and wonder. In today's digitally dependent world, where profit and survival hijack great amounts of time and mindshare, this show sets to reveal a parallel realm of experience and seeing. An experience that connects the viewer back to the ancient questions that hover above the abyss, yet are often obscured by the challenge and monotony of everyday life.

Nathan David Leight, born in Connecticut and raised in Miami, has been photographing for the majority of his life. Leight's first academic flirtations with photography began in middle school and continued throughout his college years at Harvard. Over the years when not working as an investment professional, he has shot and processed over 250,000 images. After establishing himself in New York City, Nathan now resides in South Florida with his wife, who is also his muse, and their four children.

Nathan David Leight, born in Connecticut and raised in Miami, has been photographing for the majority of his life. Leight's first academic flirtations with photography began in middle school and continued throughout his college years at Harvard. Over the years when not working as an investment professional, he has shot and processed over 250,000 images. After establishing himself in New York City, Nathan now resides in South Florida with his wife, who is also his muse, and their four children